About MHSLA

The Michigan Health Sciences Libraries Association, MHSLA, is a nonprofit professional association committed to fostering excellence in health sciences library services. MHSLA members work in hospitals, universities and corporations, or as private consultants and information brokers. MHSLA provides members with high-quality continuing education, the opportunity to purchase selected electronic resources at a reduced price, and the opportunity to network with interesting and innovative people.

History

The Michigan Health Sciences Libraries Association was officially organized in 1977, though Michigan health sciences librarians have been active in resource sharing and cooperative ventures since World War II. Regional groups first developed in 1962 when the Metropolitan Detroit Medical Library Group was formed. From 1972 through the early '80s, other local groups organized in Michigan as part of MHSLA.

What Are The Benefits Of Membership?

Personal Membership:

- Continuing education opportunities for both professionals and support staff
